CHANDERI & ORCHHA

Chanderi saree making

Yarn preparation: The process starts with spinning and dyeing the yarn, typically using a combination of silk and cotton. The silk for the yarn comes from South India, and the gold threads for zari are sourced from Surat.

Warp setting: The dyed warp threads are carefully set up on the loom, where they are held vertically.

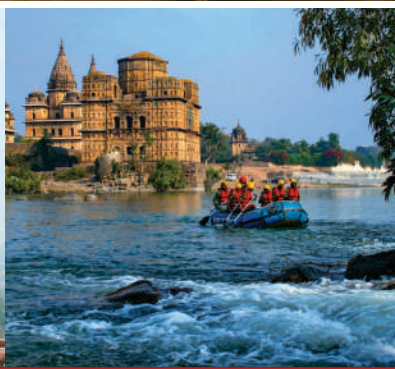

Weaving: Artisans use traditional pit looms to weave the fabric. They operate the loom with their feet to lift the warp threads.

Motifs: Chanderi sarees are known for their motifs, which are directly woven into the fabric. These designs are created using a Jacquard device, which is guided by punch cards that dictate the pattern.

Finishing: The finished fabric is known for its light and lustrous quality. The fabric is not compactly woven, which gives it its characteristic softness and a slightly sheer appearance.

Orchha

Orchha has an old-world charm. Located on the banks of the Betwa River, this small agricultural town of India has some of the most beautiful architectural gems in India. While the town is centered around the Ram Raja Temple, the town and its surrounding countryside are dotted with several monuments, forts, temples and cenotaphs. This 500 years old town is a place rich in history and heritage – a place that was going to become one of my favourites.

Places to visit : Orchha Fort, Chaturbhuj Temple, Ram Raja Temple, Laxmi Narayan Temple, Chhatris, Orchha Wildlife Sanctuary & River Rafting at Betwa River
